Decision of U. S. Board of Labor Takes "Extras" From 10,000 Men

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Punitive overtime until after the tenth hour will be taken away from 10,000 stationery firemen and others employed in railway shops throughout the country under a decision handed down today by the United States railroad labor board. The decision will be effective March 1.

The decision was a revision of the rule and working conditions entered into between the men and the director-general of the railroads on January 16, 1920.

Under the new decision, eight hours will be recognized as the standard working day. After the eighth hour the employees will be paid pro rata.

After the tenth hour they will receive time and one-half for overtime. Under the national agreement time and one-half was paid after the eighth hour.

The effect of the decision is to take away punitive overtime until after the tenth hour.

Another change of importance to the men was the authorization by the board of "split ticks."

The working day is defined as eight hours within a 12-hour period.

The decision, while applying chiefly to firemen and others, will also affect holding engineers and other shop employees.
